"Closer" is written by Patrick Marber. Set in contemporary London, it tells the story of four people in the '90s.

- Anna is a photographer who specializes in portraits of strangers.
- Dan is an obituary writer struggling to become a novelist.
- Alice is an American stripper freshly arrived in London after a bad relationship.
- Larry is a dermatologist who finds love under the most unlikely of circumstances.

When their paths cross, it's a dizzying supernova of emotions, as Marber adroitly constructs various scenes.

A witty, romantic, and very dangerous love story about chance meetings, instant attractions, and casual sex.

The play was made into a 2004 film of the same name, also written by Marber and directed by Mike Nichols.
